I believe my nominee should receive this award because he has shown utmost dedication towards teaching and supporting his students in the modules mentioned above. His passion for teaching makes the module 6CCS3CFL truly among the best-taught modules at King's College London. He provides meaningful support to his students in every manner imaginable. During the module term, he would tirelessly go through each homework and coursework submission to provide helpful personalised feedback. Whenever I felt less confident with the material or had questions about the coursework, I could ask him via email and he would respond within a matter of minutes. The sheer amount of effort he puts into the 6CCS3CFL module in itself makes him deserving of this award.

Moreover, he maintains this level of support when it comes to his supervisees in the 6CCS3PRJ module. He provided helpful feedback for my interim project report and would always be eager to know more about the progress his supervisees have made in the group meetings. He still continues to provide answers to my queries within minutes of asking.

It is impressive how he manages to maintain a high level of support towards his students across the three modules he teaches or supervises (6CCS3PEP, 6CS3CFL, and 6CCS3PRJ.) I have been fortunate to have attended all three of these modules and look forward to possibly have him as a supervisor in future projects.
